EARN Indiana program pays off for nonprofits, college interns

By Lynn Sygiel, editor, Charitable Advisors

As Teachers' Treasures executive director for the past four years, Margaret Sheehan works with volunteers daily. The Eastside nonprofit volunteer-run store, which opened in 2000, provides teachers access to donated educational supplies and other materials.

And while volunteers have been critical to the store's efforts, late last summer Sheehan added an employee to her staff -- a paid intern. It was the nonprofit's first paid intern.

But the benefit was not just to the organization, but also to the student who is gaining professional experience in the workplace. The college student has taken on additional projects that a nonprofit would not have tackled as readily. Read more.

How to attract talent to nonprofit internships

By James Clark, content marketing specialist, DATIS

Student interns are a great addition to any growing team. They're motivated, ambitious, tech savvy, and eager to gain experience in their field of study. These interns can be significantly helpful for nonprofit organizations that could benefit from having an extra set of hands around the office at a fraction of the cost of a salaried employee.

According to the DATIS 2017 Executive Priorities study, only 18 percent of nonprofit executives believe their organization is adequately staffed to deal with the current demand for their services. The same executives also labeled their inability to offer competitive pay as a top recruiting challenge. It seems that nonprofit executives are in need of labor options that won't break the bank. Building your nonprofit internship program: first steps

By Bloomerang

For Bloomerang, Sophie Penney shared ideas on how to attract, engage and retain students for intern positions. This video focuses on topics such as goal setting, procedures for developing a program, how to find candidates, and sample projects.

Penney teaches courses for the Penn State World Campus Fundraising Leadership Certificate and conducted this 2016 hour-long webinar.

Nonprofits: Ready for a raffle? Follow the rules and this fundraising tool could be a winner

By Stephanie Allgeyer, CPA, CFE, VonLehman

Raffles have long been a popular fundraiser for nonprofits. They're easy to produce, affordable for participants and reliable revenue generators.

But they're also subject to strict rules, particularly in the area of tax law. State laws on nonprofit-sponsored raffles can vary significantly, but every nonprofit that holds a raffle must comply with federal income tax requirements linked to unrelated business income, reporting and withholding.

Unrelated business income

Nonprofits are required to pay income tax on unrelated business income (UBI). It's defined as income from the regular trade or business that isn't substantially related to the organization's exempt purpose. The IRS considers raffles to be a form of gaming, which is a trade or business. If you routinely hold raffles, it's possible they could be "regularly carried on," and raffles likely aren't related to your exempt purpose.

But, raffle income can be exempted from UBI tax, if the raffle is conducted with "substantially all" volunteer labor. The term "substantially all" hasn't been formally defined, but the IRS's "unofficial guideline" is that 85 percent or more of the labor should be volunteer. If relying on this exemption, make sure you keep records to demonstrate your level of volunteer support.

Learn more about the raffle requirements.

You may need to do "backup" withholding on raffle prizes

Your organization might be required to withhold 28 percent of raffle prizes for federal income tax backup withholding. Specifically, backup withholding applies when:

- The winner doesn't furnish a correct Social Security number
- The regular income tax hasn't been withheld, and
- The winnings are at least $600 and at least 300 times the wager.

For example, you hold a raffle, selling tickets for $2 a piece. One of the participants wins $1,200 but refuses to provide you with his Social Security number. You'll pay this winner $865 ($1,200 less $335, or 28 percent of $1,198), rather than the entire amount of winnings, since your organization must pay the IRS the $335. If you mistakenly pay out the entire amount to the winner, without any withholding, your organization still owes the IRS the backup-withholding amount.
